Juan Ochando got a PhD in Biology (July 2021) at the University of Murcia, obtaining the qualification of Outstanding Cum laude and the Extraordinary Prize. Currently, he is hired by the University of Murcia through a Margarita Salas postdoctoral fellowship (Contract for access to the Spanish system of science, technology and innovation). He carried out his predoctoral studies within the "Paleofloras and Human Evolution" Project under the direction of professor JS Carrión. He is part of the ECCE HOMO Research Group, within the Faculty of Biology of the University of Murcia, as well as the Department of Environmental Biology of the Sapienza University of Rome, within the Laboratory of Paleobotany and Palynology, led by Professor Donatella Magri. His research, and therefore his postdoctoral research, focuses on the connections between the hominin fossil record and the plant fossil record.
