

Distinguished Lectures in Earth Sciences

The 4.2 ka climatic instability in the Mediterranean:
a lesson for the future?

Giovanni Zanchetta

Dipartimento di Scienze della Terra
Università di Pisa

The level of lake Prespa (Republic of North Macedonia) dramatically reduced of ca. 6 m in the last 40 yrs. This trend would increase in the future. The study of past climate variability can help to understand this trend and supporting model projections.